In today's turbulent economic times, insolvency looms large in the property world. This conference seeks to assist property lawyers to deepen their understanding of such important and topical issues. It will be divided into two main parts. The first provides an introduction to insolvency in a property law context and is aimed at junior members of property departments or those without much experience of insolvency issues.

The second part will comprise a deeper analysis of some of the more complicated interactions between property and insolvency law. It will build upon the concepts explored earlier. It is hoped that more senior and experienced property practitioners will be able to join us for this final section and that all will stay for refreshments afterwards.

The speakers are barristers Sara Benbow, Edward Rowntree and Sarah McCann, each of whom is a specialist in both property matters and insolvency.
